

As a group of faculty, students, and activists, we write to state our support of the principles of the Boycott, Divestment, and Sanctions (BDS) movement, which works to end the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian peoples.

Counter to media reports, there has been no BDS-driven opposition to Mr. Shimon Dotan's screening of his documentary The Settlers at Syracuse University.

As supporters of academic freedom, we endorse open discussions of difficult but necessary topics, including those relating to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. We support the free exchange of ideas on our campus, an important tradition at Syracuse University and a basic tenet of academic principles, ideals, and practices.

We therefore welcome speakers, scholars, and artists whose work relates to Palestinians and Israelis in adherence with the Palestinian civil society's BDS guidelines. Importantly, these guidelines do not call for the boycott of individuals for being Israeli or for expressing certain views.

Consistent with the principles of academic freedom, we call for a respectful campus environment in which BDS and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict can be openly debated and discussed.

For information on the BDS movement, please refer to <https://bdsmovement.net>.

For the guidelines of the International Academic Boycott of Israel, please see <http://www.pacbi.org/etemplate.php?id=1108>.

Name and Affiliation:

1. Chandra Talpade Mohanty, Chair and Distinguished Professor, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
2. Carol Fadda, Associate Professor of English, Syracuse University
3. Amy Kallander, Associate Professor of History, Syracuse University
4. Robin Riley, Director of LGBT Studies, Syracuse University
5. Mali Golomb-Leavitt, B.A. Psychology, Alum '15
6. Crystal Bartolovich, Associate Professor of English, Syracuse University
7. Tula Goenka, Associate Professor of Television, Radio & Film, Syracuse University
8. Jackie Orr, Associate Professor of Sociology, Syracuse University
9. Susan S. Wadley, Ford Maxwell Professor of South Asian Studies, Syracuse University
10. Ken Harper, Associate Professor of Multimedia, Photography & Design, Syracuse University

11. Eunjung Kim, Assistant Professor, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
12. Jessie Speer, PhD Candidate, Department of Geography, Syracuse University
13. Laura Jaffee, PhD Student, Cultural Foundations of Education, Syracuse University
14. Hasmik Djoulakian, Undergraduate Student, Women's and Gender Studies and Citizenship and Civic Engagement, Syracuse University '17
15. Mara Sapon-Shevin, Professor of Inclusive Education, School of Education, Syracuse University
16. Jacquelyn Micieli-Voutsinas, PhD, Department of Geography, Syracuse University
17. Kait Simon, B.A. Policy Studies, Alum '14
18. Pedro DiPietro, Assistant Professor, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University.
19. Hayley Marama Cavino, Program Coordinator, Democratizing Knowledge Project, Syracuse University
20. Taveeshi Singh, PhD Student, Social Science Program and Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
21. Gwendolyn D. Pough, Professor Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
22. Natasha S.K., PhD Candidate, Social Science Programme, Syracuse University
23. Dana L. Cloud, Professor, Graduate Director, Department of Communication and Rhetorical Studies, Syracuse University
24. Cecilia Green, Associate Professor, Department of Sociology, Syracuse University
25. Roger Hallas, Associate Professor of English, Syracuse University
26. Vani Kannan, PhD Student, Composition and Cultural Rhetoric, Syracuse University
27. Minnie Bruce Pratt, Professor (retired), Women's and Gender Studies, LGBT Studies, Composition and Cultural Rhetoric, Syracuse University
28. Keish Eun-Jin Kim, B.A. Women's and Gender Studies and Geography, Alum '16
29. Yanira Rodríguez, PhD Student, Composition and Cultural Rhetoric, Syracuse University
30. Karrieann Soto Vega, PhD Candidate, Composition and Cultural Rhetoric, Teaching Associate, Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
31. Himika Bhattacharya, Assistant Professor, Women's and Gender Studies, Syracuse University
- 32.