| 7 MR. KESLAR: That's a 8 mischaracterization, and to the extent it calls 9 for it asks Mr. Hawk to explain what was said 10 to him, which is previously undisclosed 13:37:47 11 information, it's privileged, and you don't have 12 to answer that question. 13 Q. Are you going to testify about what you 14 said to Dr. Raimondo? 15 MR. KESLAR: He's he is not a party 13:37:58 16 to this lawsuit. He's not planning on there's 17 no reason for him to be testifying at this point 18 as he's not a party to this lawsuit. It's an 19 improper question. It calls for potentially 20 legal conclusions and I'm going to instruct you 13:38:12 10 not to answer that, either. 21 Q. What did you say to Dr. Raimondo? 22 MR. KESLAR: Asked and answered, but to                                                                     | 789101112131415161718192021222324 | Q. Okay. A. Maybe a little bit more. Q. Where were you standing in relation to Gibson's Bakery? A. Fairly close to the entrance. 13:54:48 Q. Did you talk to her actually in front of Gibson's Bakery? A. It might be slightly to the east. Q. Okay. So I'm bad with directions, so if you're looking at Gibson's Bakery, would that be to the left or to the right? A. To the left. Q. Okay. And how long did your conversation with her last? MR. KESLAR: That's undisclosed information. It really invades the reporter's state of mind. It calls for information protected by the reporter's privilege.                                          |

Q. Okay. What was her height?  A. Shorter than me. Q. How tall are you?  A. Five foot ten, five foot eleven, somewhere in that range. Q. About how much shorter than you is she? A. A head or so, I believe. Q. And what do you consider to be a head or 14:00:47 so? A. (Indicating.) Maybe 18 inches, 12 inches. Q. Okay. So you believe that she may be about 18 inches shorter than you?  A. 18 to 12 inches shorter than me, possibly. Q. Thank you. Is her hair all brown or are there other colors? A. I don't know how she wears her hair. Q. Was she wearing a coat? A. I don't recall. Q. Did she have a cell phone with her? A. I don't know what she might have had with her.  14:01:19  Molnar Reporting Services, LLC (440) 340-6161  Page 139  Q. Okay. So you don't know what she had with her, if anything? A. I didn't conduct any kind of questioning along those lines. Q. No, and I understand. 14:01:29  My question is when you observed her and when you interacted with her, what did she have on her person? A. I don't know what she was carrying. Q. Okay. So she approached you and allegedly blocked your view and then you moved to the side. What happened after that? A. She moved again to block it. | I'm unclear of whether she was wearing them at the time.  Q. Okay. What was her height? A. Shorter than me. Q. How tall are you? A. It's undisclosed information gathered during the news reporter — reporting process.  MR. HOLMAN: I'm going to direct the court reporter to direct the witness to answer 14:05:21 the question.  THE REPORTER: Sir, would you please answer the question.  MR. KESLAR: And again, I'm going to instruct you not to answer based on your First 14:05:28 Amendment privilege, which if not asserted would be waived.  Q. So at some point, did your conversation with Dr. Raimondo end?  A. Yes. 14:05:42  Q. How did it end?  A. I'm unclear what you're asking.  Q. Okay. So it's your testimony today that you had a conversation with Dr. Raimondo, correct? 14:05:55  A. Yes, sir.  Q. I presume, correct me if I'm wrong, but at some point, you stopped conversing with her,          | 234567891011121314151617181920212223       | as you were taking pictures, correct?  A. Yes. Q. You've also testified that you moved several feet away, and that in response, she moved several feet away to block your view a second time, correct?  A. Yes. Q. So my question simply is did Meredith Raimondo that day attempt to block your view a third time?  14:07:54  A. She didn't attempt to use her body to do it, no. Q. Did she attempt to use anything to block your view?  A. She attempted to argue that we should not be taking photos. Q. So when did she say that you should not be taking photos?  A. During the conversation that we had after she attempted to block my view.  Q. Okay. So during your conversation with her where she was trying to block your view, she said that you should not be taking pictures?     |

| VDDFOGRAPHER: On the record, 2:50, MR. HOLMAN: We are back on the record. Q. So Mr. Hawk, when you were taking to Dr. Raimondo, do you know whether or not there is were people taking pictures of you two? MR. KFSLAR: Objection. State of mind. Beliforial process. First Amendment privilege. I instruct you not to arswor. MR. HOLMAN: I don't understand. What's the state of mind? This us asking for him to state of mind? This us asking for him to state of mind? This us asking for him to state there people taking pictures of him and the editional part of this and what's the state of mind? This us asking for him to state the whether or not a certain fact took place. Were there people taking pictures of him and the proper asking regards only Ohio Shield Law. The Ohio Shield Law concern the First Amendment privilege, which is much broader than the Ohio Shield Law. The Ohio Shield Law concern sources of information, not—which there's a to move that the First Amendment and the Ohio Constitution protects than just sources of information, not—which there's a to move that the First Amendment and the Ohio Constitution protects than just sources of information, not—which there's a to move that the First Amendment and the Ohio Constitution protects than just sources of information, which is protected by Ohio Shield Law. For the record here, 13 I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. 15 Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The 14:54:53 16 e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this 16 is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, 18 quote, "I generally do not disagree with your 19 understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that 20 Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the 14:55:20 alleged shoplifting incident and public demonstrations are subject to deposition 23 questioning." 25 think the question about whether people were 14:55:40 25 Molnar Reporting Services, LLC (440) 340-6161  Page 169  An improper objection, I would respectfully disagree. I think your question did not ask for what he knows. And so I would draw a distinction there because it calls for information he might have learned from 14:57:02 somebody else as opposed to what he personally same and promother mail, Mr. East and the proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder and communications that you and Mr. Snyder and communications that you and Mr. Snyder and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that 14:57:31 there are no issues essentially with us asking questions and that's all Tm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to  Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The c-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, quote, "I generally do not disagree with your understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that  Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the alleged shoplifting incident and public demonstrations are subject to deposition question about whether people were  14:55:40  Calls for information he might have learned from somebody else as opposed to what he personally saw.  MR. HOLMAN: Well, you know, I think that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder to reckanged, because obviously, the point of you two talking was to come to some understanding on the scope, the proper socpe of the examination and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. So I'll restate the question.  14:57:49 Q. When you were talking to Dr. Raimondo, di you observe people taking your picture? A. I don't recall seeing anyone take my picture.  Q. Okay. For the record here, 13 I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. 14 I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to 15 Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The 16 e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this 17 is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, 18 quote, "I generally do not disagree with your 19 understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that 10 and communications that you and Mr. Snyder 11 exchanged, because obviously, the point of you 12 two talking was to come to some understanding on 13 the scope, the proper scope of the examination 14 and the proper assertion of the privilege. And 15 here, you know, again, you state verbatim that 14:57:31 16 there are no issues essentially with us asking 17 questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, 18 and that's all I'm asking is for him to share 19 understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that 20 Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the 21 alleged shoplifting incident and public 22 demonstrations are subject to deposition 23 questioning." 24 So setting aside what the law says, I 25 think the question about whether people were 14:55:40 29 that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder 20 exchanged, because obviously, the point of you 21 two talking was to come to some understanding on 22 the scope, the proper scope of the examination 24 and the proper assertion of the privilege. And 29 the scope, the proper scope of the examination 21 and communications that you and Mr. Snyder 22 two talking was to come to some understanding on 23 the scope, the proper scope of the examination 24 and the proper assertion of the privilege. And 25 the proper assertion of the privilege. 29 And 20 When you state verbatim that 21:57:31 21 think the question about whether people were 22 did you observe people taking your picture? 23 A. So PII  restate the question.  14:57:49  Q. When you were talking to Dr. Raimondo,  did you observe people taking your picture?  A. I don't recall seeing anyone take my  picture.  Q. Okay. | I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to  Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, quote, "I generally do not disagree with your understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the alleged shoplifting incident and public demonstrations are subject to deposition questioning."  No setting aside what the law says, I think the question about whether people were  14 and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that 14:57:31 there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. For the record here, I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 2345678910111213                                                                   | an improper objection, I would respectfully disagree. And so I would draw a distinction there because it calls for information he might have learned from somebody else as opposed to what he personally saw.  MR. HOLMAN: Well, you know, I think that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder exchanged, because obviously, the point of you two talking was to come to some understanding on the scope, the proper scope of the examination and the proper assertion of the privilege. And                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |

And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

For the record here, I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, quote, "I generally do not disagree with your understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 234567891011121314151617181920                         | an improper objection, I would respectfully disagree. I think your question did not ask for what Mr. Hawk saw, but rather what he knows. And so I would draw a distinction there because it calls for information he might have learned from somebody else as opposed to what he personally saw.  MR. HOLMAN: Well, you know, I think that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder exchanged, because obviously, the point of you two talking was to come to some understanding on the scope, the proper scope of the examination and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. So I'll restate the question.                                                                                                                                          |

VIDEOGRAPHER: Off the record, 2:52. (Discussion off record.) VIDEOGRAPHER: On the record, 2:52. MR. HOLMAN: Would you read back my question, please. (Record read.) MR. HOLMAN: Okay. For the record here, I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, quote, "I generally do not disagree with your understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the alleged shoplifting incident and public demonstrations are subject to deposition                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 2345678910111213141516171819202122             | an improper objection, I would respectfully disagree. I think your question did not ask for what Mr. Hawk saw, but rather what he knows. And so I would draw a distinction there because it calls for information he might have learned from somebody else as opposed to what he personally saw.  MR. HOLMAN: Well, you know, I think that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder exchanged, because obviously, the point of you two talking was to come to some understanding on the scope, the proper scope of the examination and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. So I'll restate the question.  Q. When you were talking to Dr. Raimondo, did you observe people taking your picture?                                                   |

For the record here, I think the objection is respectfully misplaced. I want to read an e-mail, Mr. Keslar, from you to Mr. Snyder dated Monday, April 16, 2018. The e-mail is attached to Exhibit 1, and again, this is an e-mail from you to Mr. Snyder, and it says, quote, "I generally do not disagree with your understanding of Ohio's Shield Law, in that Mr. Hawk's personal observations related to the alleged shoplifting incident and public demonstrations are subject to deposition questioning." So setting aside what the law says, I                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 23456789101112131415161718192021222324 | an improper objection, I would respectfully disagree. I think your question did not ask for what Mr. Hawk saw, but rather what he knows. And so I would draw a distinction there because it calls for information he might have learned from somebody else as opposed to what he personally saw.  MR. HOLMAN: Well, you know, I think that it's entirely proper to rely upon the e-mail and communications that you and Mr. Snyder exchanged, because obviously, the point of you two talking was to come to some understanding on the scope, the proper scope of the examination and the proper assertion of the privilege. And here, you know, again, you state verbatim that there are no issues essentially with us asking questions about Mr. Hawk's personal observations, and that's all I'm asking is for him to share with us his personal observations. So I'll restate the question.  Q. When you were talking to Dr. Raimondo, did you observe people taking your picture?  A. I don't recall seeing anyone take my picture. |
