

Fighting Smart Against Critical Race Theory in Education

Professor William A. Jacobson

Cornell Law School &
Legal Insurrection Foundation

ALEC Annual Meeting
July 2021

Seven Keys to Victory

Ready to counter the creep of Critical Race Theory in education? Here's how.

It's a marathon, not a sprint.

The damage to education has taken generations. Meaningful educational reform will not take place in just a few years, so start now.

It's all about equality.

Don't concede their language by using terms like "antiracism" and "equity." Equality is our nation's highest ideal. Make it the center of your fight.

Empower parents with transparency.

Pass laws that require transparency for curricula, access to teaching materials, and parental observation.

Focus on K-12.

Because minor children are required by law to attend school, there is greater governmental oversight of their curriculum. The public has a say in what kids learn.

For higher education, focus on conduct and existing anti-discrimination laws.

Trying to ban ideas in higher education forfeits the moral higher ground and is impractical.
Focus instead on conduct and enforcing existing legal protections in academia.

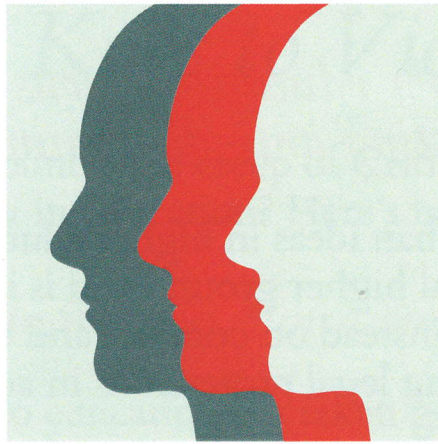

Go positive!

Don't just fight against Critical Race Theory. Provide alternatives that examine America's history honestly but emphasize that which unifies us.

Embrace "1000 Points of Fight."

Use "swarm tactics" to attack the problem from every action. No single action is enough, but all actions are important.
Everyone can do something.

William A. Jacobson is a leading voice on free speech and academic freedom in America. He is a Clinical Professor at Cornell Law School, as well as the publisher of the Legal Insurrection news and commentary website. The views expressed here are his own. He regularly appears in major media outlets from Fox News to the Wall Street Journal. His newest project, criticalrace.org, tracks developments in the implementation of and fight against Critical Race Theory/Training in education.

CRITICAL RACE TRAINING I N E D U C A T I O N

is a project of Legal Insurrection Foundation, a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. For the latest news and an updated library of resources, visit

criticalrace.org

Professor Jacobson is available to speak at your event, on your panel, or in your committee hearing. Please send inquiries to Ellen Carmichael at ellen@thelafayettecompany.com.