BREITBART.COM TO RE-RELEASE PREVIOUSLY BANNED ANDREW BREITBART DOCUMENTARY - HATING BREITBART

FILM TO STREAM FREE FOR LIMITED TIME BEGINNING MARCH 11TH, MARKING 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF ANDREW BREITBART'S TRAGIC DEATH IN 2012.

Los Angeles, California, March 10th 2022 – The producers of the feature length documentary, Hating Breitbart, are proud to announce the re-release of their intimate portrait of self described “Middle class media mogul,” Andrew Breitbart.

While everyone has heard of Breitbart.com, due to his untimely death in 2012, many people do not know the man that made it happen.

Breitbart leveraged his position as behind the scenes editor of the Drudge Report to launch his disruptive media juggernaut, Breitbart.com.

The filmmakers followed Breitbart, a former liberal, for 2 years capturing the meteoric rise of an internet media upstart who built his eponymous brand by exposing corruption at America's highest levels and becoming an unlikely leader and darling of American conservatives everywhere, consequently earning him America's most powerful enemies.

“Andrew Breitbart declared war on the mainstream media and on the institutional left. Hating Breitbart will show you how and why he did it,” says director, Andrew Marcus.

Commemorating ten years since Andrew Breitbart's tragic death, free streaming of the film will be available to the public beginning march 11th for a limited time on Breitbart.com. Starting in late March, the film will be made available for free viewing on HatingBreitbart.com.

“This is the perfect moment for the world to rediscover this film,” said Marcus. “Breitbart was one of the early targets of modern cancel culture. His story was unique at the time, but a decade later, we live in a new era of institutionalized cancel culture. Now Andrew Breitbart's story is everyone's story.”

The film itself was a target of organized cancel culture when originally released, earning the distinction of having the widest point spread at the time between audience score (98%) and critic score (0%) on Rotten Tomatoes.

Originally released in 2012, just months after Breitbart's passing, the film has been unavailable for viewing by the general public since it was banned from major platforms in the aftermath of Donald Trump's 2016 election.

“We're thrilled to be working with breitbart.com to make Hating Breitbart available again,” said Marcus. “Relaunching it with them feels like we're bringing the story home where Andrew's spirit will always live on.”
